Seeks Settlement of Sister's Status

Vice-President Charles Curtis is trying to find out just where his sister, Mrs. Edward E. Gann, right, his official hostess, fits into Washington society. Former Secretary of State Kellogg placed her below the wives of diplomats, but Curtis is appealing to Secretary Stimson for final word on the greatest social question which has faced Washington since the famous Peggy O'Neil incident.

Make Communities Interesting and Stop Runaway Girls, Authority Says

Discontent, School Mal-adjustment, New Freedom Blamed For Desertions.

NEW YORK, April 6.—Married men and women in America are showing an increasing tendency to take "French Leave" of each other, Miss Virginia M. Murray, executive secretary of the Travelers Aid Society, said today in discussing the organization's annual report which reveals an increase in the number of persons who run away from home.

"They pack up and leave over less objection than they did years ago," declared Miss Murray, a social worker for 18 years. "If they don't like the way things are going at home they get out. Our desertion cases are on the increase. I guess it's this new freedom we hear so much about."

The statistics of the society, just compiled, show that 5,319 persons ran away from home in the United States in 1928 as against 5,195 in 1927. New Orleans is not included in the 1928 figures, that city having neglected to send in a report.

RURAL RUNAWAYS
Girls who leave home generally come from the small rural communities, according to Miss Murray, and a great many of them are actuated by the urge to "see life" as they conceive it from peering at the heroines of the motion pictures.

"Discontent is a big factor in the cases of girl runaways," said Miss Murray. "They see the movies, get the idea of having a better time and making more money. So away they go to the big city. Often practically without funds. Their faith is boundless."

"The small mining communities send forth a comparatively heavy quota of runaway girls. Often the parents of these girls are foreigners, and are very strict with their children. The parents exaggerate restraint; the children exaggerate freedom."

INTEREST IS NEEDED
"School mal-adjustment also accounts for many runaways, from cities and rural communities alike. Girls, for example, fear the possibility of not being able to pass their examinations and, rather than face humiliation, run away from home. Girls are more sensitive than boys on the matter of failing in school."

"Is there any solution for the runaway problem?" Miss Murray was asked.

"Girls and boys will not run away from an interesting community," she replied. "Most runaways come from drab communities. It is not enough to condemn the bad dance hall or the roadhouse. Our women's clubs should provide a substitute—community dancing, or something of that sort. It should not be a case of all suppression and no expression."

FURTHER TAX CUTS PUT OFF
Hoover's Opposition Will Postpone Reduction For At Least One Year.

WASHINGTON, April 6.—President Hoover's opposition to a further slashing of federal taxes before the government's "budget is balanced," backed by a like sentiment among congressional leaders, today killed any chance of tax reduction legislation for another year at least and probably for two years.

Following the president's wishes, administration leaders will oppose enactment of tax reduction legislation at the coming special session and undoubtedly at the succeeding regular long session. This would postpone tax relief until the short session, beginning in December, 1930.

Although a $100,000,000 surplus will rest in the treasury at the end of the current fiscal year, administration leaders continue to fear the bugaboo of a governmental deficit. Administration spokesmen pointed out that $80,000,000 of the surplus came from taxes upon the increased profits of Wall Street speculators. Any turn in the market, they added, would wipe out this revenue in the coming fiscal year. They likewise dread the ever growing total of governmental appropriations, the cost of flood control and the expected federal outlay for farm relief.

CINCINNATI, O., April 6.—Breck Lutes, 28, of Middletown, O., today faced sentence of life imprisonment for the murder of Peter Dumelle, marshal of North College Hill during a robbery in a recreational hall there a year ago last Easter.

A jury of five women and seven men decided his fate last night recommending mercy which makes life imprisonment mandatory.

Rodney Ford also of Cincinnati is now in a death cell at the Ohio penitentiary awaiting execution which has been set for April 16 for the same crime.

CONSERVING MEASURE NOW UP TO COOPER

House Passes Bill Creating

99 To 9 Vote.

COLUMBUS, O., April 6.—Preparation were being made today by House Clerk John P. Maynard to transmit to Gov. Myers Y. Cooper the Emmons conservation bill.

This measure, introduced by Sen. V. D. Emmons, Summit-co, passed the senate March 26, by a vote of 26 to 1, and went through the house, unamended, late yesterday by a vote of 99 to 9. It was supported by the governor and is one of the measures included in the "administration's" legislative program.

Providing for the creation of a state department of conservation, the measure abolishes the present division of fish and game, in the department of agriculture, and transfers to the conservation department all functions of the fish and game bureau as well as all powers now vested in the state department of public works relative to inland waters.

GABINET MEMBER
The governor is to select one member of the conservation commission as president who will, also, be a member of the governor's cabinet. Not more than four of the eight members of the conservation commission can belong to the same political party.

It will be the duty of the conservation department to establish the following bureaus:

A natural resource bureau to supervise conservation of such natural resources as streams, lakes, swamps, ponds, reservoirs, water-power, drainage, watersheds; develop waste lands, wild flowers, game cover, eliminate obnoxious vegetation and cooperate with the state forestry department.

SHE SHOTS SELF DURING NIGHTMARE
JACKSON, O., April 6.—Suffering from a bullet wound which she inflicted upon herself during a nightmare, Mrs. Leon Ehrman, formerly of Pittsburgh, is in a serious condition in a hospital here today.

Mrs. Ehrman has been in ill health for some time, and this sickness resulted in frequent nightmares. Becoming excited during one of these fitful dreams, Mrs. Ehrman is said to have reached under her pillow, obtained a revolver and then fired a shot through her own head.

Miss Allison Delaplane is the week-end guest of friends in Columbus.

Flames Play Havoc With Gigantic Vessel

Forty million marks sounds like a lot of jack to lose. As a matter of fact, it is because, which ever way you figure it, it's still about 10,000,000 berries in U. S. money. Anyway, that's the estimated damage of the disastrous fire which threatened to destroy the giant ocean liner "Europa" while she lay in Hamburg, Germany, harbor. Picture shows flames eating away at a terrific pace. Repairs will begin immediately, however, and ship should be in condition to cope with trans-Atlantic traffic by next summer.

BACKS OPINION ON MALT SALES

Attorney General Bettman
Strikes Back at Anti-Saloon League Criticism.

Attorney General Gilbert Bettman Saturday had struck back at The American Issue, Anti-Saloon League organ, for assailing his opinion that neither existing federal or state law prohibits the sale of malt syrups intended for uses other than liquor making.

He said:
"Now that the decision has been attacked by The American Issue, it might not be amiss to disclose the facts. The decision was written by Charles G. Williams, one of my staff, who is an ardent dry, and was special counsel under Attorney General Crabbe. Anticipating that some of the extremists among the dry forces might not like the decision, I personally did not change a word of it."

"The decision was voted for by my entire staff of 15 men, containing many ardent dries. Not a lawyer in Ohio could possibly come to any other conclusion on the question asked. It results from the plain language of the 18th amendment, the Volstead act and the decisions of the higher courts."

"Does The American Issue want the attorney general of Ohio to rape the law in order to please some dries? If The American Issue wants the sale of malt syrup for any purpose and no matter what the intent, made illegal in Ohio, why does it not go to the Legislature of Ohio to pass the Phipps bill? It can't be done by trying to brow-beat the present attorney general who has and will interpret the law as it exists."

Mrs. Ella Hornbeck, Mrs. Mary Denman, Mrs. George E. Hammel, attended the installation of Mt. Olive White Shrine in Columbus, Friday night.

HOOPER BANS ROUGH STUFF

Prohibition To Be Enforced,
But Without Violence,
President Orders.

WASHINGTON, April 6.—Strict enforcement of prohibition—but no rough stuff.

That somewhat slangily describes the prohibition enforcement policy of the Hoover administration, as outlined today in the most authoritative quarter.

Melodramatic gun-play by federal agents, unnecessary violence, and rough-house tactics in conducting raids without legal sanction will not be tolerated. Orders to this effect have been issued and sent trucking down throughout the personnel of the federal enforcement machine.

President Hoover wants no Aurora incidents involving federal agents. The deplorable circumstances surrounding the killing of Mrs. Lillian De King before the eyes of her small son in Aurora have been brought to the president's attention, and while no comment was forthcoming because it is viewed as a state matter, it can be said that federal agents will be severely punished if they resort to similar tactics.

Federal agents are under orders to use firearms only in defense of their lives.

Official treasury records show that 190 persons have been killed in shooting affrays between citizens and enforcement agents since the eighteenth amendment became effective. Of this number 25 have been killed in the last 15 months.

CAN HITS CROCK; JOE WEARS PATCH

The patch that Joe Lynch is wearing on his forehead marks the spot where a springing can fell off the wall and hit him on the head, while he was at his duties in the Barrere and Nickerson store.

It hasn't been many months since Joe was wearing another patch on his nose which marked the spot where a golf ball suddenly stopped after a long drive.

STILL UNMARRIED, KOCH ANNOUNCES

The marriage of William G. Koch, of Fox, announced in the Robtown news of last week, was greatly exaggerated. Mr. Koch stated at the Herald office that it was entirely a mistake and wished his friends to know the truth. He took the premature belling and the many congratulations good naturedly but wishes all to know that he is still a single man.

HE TOOK THE FIFTY THOUSAND DOLLARS

WOOSTER, O., April 6.—An inheritance of $50,000 from his uncle, the late Henry Clay Frick, multimillionaire steel operator, lasted John Frick of this city, just seven years.

Several business ventures he undertook, including a silver fox ranch, failed friends say.

DEAD, INJURED MARK PATH OF FREAK STORMS

Half Dozen Struck Ravaged on Friday in Wake of Abnormal
Heat Wave.

CHICAGO, April 6.—Ten persons are known to be dead and scores injured today as a result of freak storms that ravaged a half dozen middle western states in the wake of yesterday's abnormal heat wave. Property damage probably will total a million dollars.

The storms varied in the different states from torrential downpours to tornadoes. In Minnesota and Wisconsin buildings were demolished with attendant loss of life, most of the casualties resulting in the rural sections.

C. F. Bryan, 62, a farmer, was killed when the tornado struck near Taylor Falls, Minn.

RELIEVE BODIES BURIED
Three persons were reported killed in the vicinity of Rice Lake, Wis., two others, living on a farm near Rice Lake, are missing and their bodies are believed buried in the wreckage of their home.

Minneapolis, Clayton, Wis., and Little Rock, Ia., reported one death each. Reeves, Wis., reported two dead.

The transmitting plant of radio station WRRM at Minneapolis was demolished by the storm, and employees escaped injury.

The number of dead and injured may be swelled as wire communication over the broken territory is restored. Several of the more seriously injured are expected to live.

Communication and power lines were blown down with several temporarily paralyzed.

300 FLEE HORROR
In Detroit a terrific downpour on the east side marooned 300 residents when Chicago Creek overflowed its banks in the land, Mich., 300 families fled their homes when four dams in the townships river collapsed.

The river was at least 10 feet above its normal stage and 2,000 acres were under water.

Throughout the storm-stricken area, farms and cities were hit. It was estimated that several days would be required before an accurate check-up on the toll could be accomplished.

PREPARE FOR GOLF SEASON

Permanent Greens At Pickaway
Country Club Will Be Ready Soon.

Enthusiastic golfers already are replacing the turf and sanding for lost balls in the rough on the course at the Pickaway Country club. There is no surer sign of spring than groups of business men standing around company cards and describing new clubs.

In ten days or two weeks the permanent greens will be ready for use. Workmen are busy rounding them into shape, and they have come out wonderfully in the past few days. But their condition in ten days will of course depend on the weather between then and now. If the present weather continues the greens may be ready by next Sunday.

The formal opening of the golf course and the club house will probably be on Wednesday, May 15. A program of real entertainment is planned for this date. In the meantime the golfers are acquiring that popular complexion, sun-tan and getting into shape for some spirited mid-summer matches.

Make Communities Interesting and Stop Runaway Girls, Authority Says

Discontent, School Mal-adjustment, New Freedom Blamed For Desertions.

NEW YORK, April 6.—Married men and women in America are showing an increasing tendency to take "French Leave" of each other, Miss Virginia M. Murray, executive secretary of the Travelers Aid Society, said today in discussing the organization's annual report which reveals an increase in the number of persons who run away from home.

Dream of Vehicle for Rail and Road Comes True To Uncle of Local Man

Col. J. C. Bonner Solves How To Meet Motor Truck
Competition.

Joseph C. Bonner, of Toledo, is the subject of an article in a recent edition of the Toledo Blade. Mr. Bonner is an uncle by marriage of Joseph M. Bell of Circleville, having married Nellie Turney Bell, Mr. Bell's aunt and a former resident of Circleville.

The article, one of a series on "Why Toledo Grows" by Frank L. Skeldon, is as follows:

"Dreams do come true, Colonel Joseph C. Bonner, former internal revenue collector of this district and a pioneer Toledoan, has found out after a quarter of a century of dreaming and working with one goal in mind."

"Twenty-five years ago, Colonel Bonner conceived the idea of what he termed a rail wagon—a railroad car with regulation railroad wheels and tread, but equipped with an extra pneumatic tired set of wheels which could be lowered at stations and the rail-wagon carted to the door of the buyer of the goods in the car."

"For twenty-five years Colonel Bonner has worked in perfecting the device and trying to interest some railroad in the plan. Changes vital to railroads and interurban lines of the country have come about in that time. The motor truck entered the field and made difficult the problem of short haul freight for railroads and the interurbans."

"How to meet motor truck competition has been the problem of the interurbans. Railroads met it by installing motor truck lines. Interurbans have been trying to meet it through mergers with other lines, effecting great economies of operation and faster service, and in other ways."

"Henry L. Doherty saw in Colonel Bonner's rail-wagon the answer to the problem from the standpoint of struggling interurbans. Colonel Bonner now is on the payroll of the Doherty engineering staff.

CAN HITS CROCK; JOE WEARS PATCH

The patch that Joe Lynch is wearing on his forehead marks the spot where a sprinkling can fell off the wall and hit him on the head, while he was at his duties in the Barrere and Nickerson store.

It hasn't been many months since Joe was wearing another patch on his nose which marked the spot where a golf ball suddenly stopped after a long drive.

STILL UNMARRIED, KOCH ANNOUNCES

The marriage of William G. Koch, of Fox, announced in the Robtown news of last week, was greatly exaggerated. Mr. Koch stated at the Herald office that it was entirely a mistake and wished his friends to know the truth. He took the premature belling and the many congratulations good naturedly, but wishes all to know that he is still a single man.

PORTSMOUTH, O., April 6.—Despondent because her husband is a consistent drinker, police declared, Mrs. Martha Sullivan, of Van Burke, near here, committed suicide by drinking poison. Her husband, Daniel, according to authorities, is in jail today on a charge of being intoxicated.

For the last two years the best engineering talent in the country has been at work on the rail-wagon plan with Colonel Bonner.

"And the dream of a quarter of a century comes near to fruition in the announcement that an order for several of the rail wagons has been placed with the Brill Car Co. and they will be given a trial. The last chapter of the story of this quarter century dream is in the making and engineers believe the rail-wagon may revolutionize the interurban freight business of the country, thanks to the persistence of a pioneer Toledo man of vision."

"The rail-wagons will be ready in a few weeks for their trials. Colonel Bonner is anxiously awaiting the result of the tests with the equipment over which he has labored so many years."

HOOVER BANS ROUGH STUFF

Prohibition To Be Enforced,
But Without Violence,
President Orders.

WASHINGTON, April 6.—Strict enforcement of prohibition—but no rough stuff.

That somewhat slangily describes the prohibition enforcement policy of the Hoover administration, as outlined today in the most authoritative quarter.

Melodramatic gun-play by federal agents, unnecessary violence, and rough-house tactics in conducting raids without legal sanction will not be tolerated. Orders to this effect have been issued and sent trickling down through the personnel of the federal enforcement machine.

President Hoover wants no Aurora incidents involving federal agents. The deplorable circumstances surrounding the killing of Mrs. Lillian De King before the eyes of her small son in Aurora have been brought to the president's attention, and while no comment was forthcoming because it is viewed as a state matter, it can be said that federal agents will be severely punished if they resort to similar tactics.

Federal agents are under orders to use firearms only in defense of their lives. Official treasury records show that 190 persons have been killed in shooting affrays between citizens and enforcement agents since the eighteenth amendment became effective. Of this number 25 have been killed in the last 15 months.

HE TOOK THE FIFTY THOUSAND DOLLARS

WOOSTER, O., April 6.—An inheritance of $50,000 from his uncle, the late Henry Clay Frick, multimillionaire steel operator, lasted John Frick, of this city, just seven years.

Frick has filed a petition in the federal district court at Cleveland, setting forth that he is bankrupt. Liabilities of $4,500 were listed. He declared he has no assets.

Several business ventures he undertook, including a silver fox ranch, failed, friends say.

DEAD, INJURED MARK PATH OF FREAK STORMS

Half Dozen States Ravaged on Friday In Wake of Abnormal
Heat Wave.

CHICAGO, April 6.—Ten persons are known to be dead and scores injured today as a result of freak storms that ravaged a half dozen middle western states in the wake of yesterday's abnormal heat wave. Property damage probably will total a million dollars.

The storms varied in the different states from torrential downpours to tornadoes. In Minnesota and Wisconsin buildings were demolished with attendant loss of life, most of the casualties resulting in the rural sections.

C. F. Bryan, 62, a farmer, was killed when the tornado struck near Taylor Falls, Minn.

BELIEVE BODIES BURIED

Three persons were reported killed in the vicinity of Rice Lake, Wis., two others, living on a farm near Rice Lake, are missing and their bodies are believed buried in the wreckage of their home.

Minneapolis, Clayton, Wis., and Little Rock, Ia., reported one death each. Reeves, Wis., reported two dead.

The transmitting plant of radio station WRHM at Minneapolis was demolished by the storm, but employees escaped injury.

The number of dead and injured may be swelled as wire communication over the stricken territory is restored. Several of the more seriously injured are not expected to live.

Communication and power lines were blown down with service temporarily paralyzed.

300 FLEE HOMES

In Detroit a terrific downpour on the east side marooned 30,000 residents when Connors creek overflowed its banks. In Midland, Mich., 300 families fled their homes when four dams in the Tittabawassee river collapsed following 12 hours of incessant rainfall. The river was 12 feet above flood stage and 2,000 acres were seven feet under water.

Throughout the storm-struck area, farms and cattle were hard hit. It was estimated that several days would be required before an accurate check-up on the toll could be accomplished.

PREPARE FOR GOLF SEASON

Permanent Greens At Pick-away Country Club Will Be Ready Soon.

Enthusiastic golfers already are replacing the turf and searching for lost balls in the rough on the course at the Pickaway Country Club. There is no surer sign of spring than groups of business men standing around comparing cards and describing new clubs.

In ten days or two weeks the permanent greens will be ready for use. Workmen are busy rounding them into shape, and they have come out wonderfully in the past few days. But their condition in ten days will of course depend on the weather between then and now. If the present weather continues the green may be ready by next Sunday.

The formal opening of the golf course and the club house will probably be on Wednesday, May 15. A program of real entertainment is planned for this date. In the meantime the golfers are acquiring that popular complexion, sun-tan and getting into shape for some spirited mid-summer matches.

I. N. S. HEAD TOURS EUROPEAN BUREAUS

LONDON, April 6.—Barry Faris, general news manager of International News Service which serves The Circleville Herald, arrived in London today to begin the regular annual editorial inspection of I. N. S. European bureaus. He crossed on the S. S. Berengaria.

Mr. Faris' itinerary includes the Madrid bureau, where I. N. S. is serving a constantly increasing number of Spanish newspapers with a regular world news report.

LINER IS AGROUND

NEW YORK, April 6.—The French liner, Paris, went aground in a fog on the mud flats of South Brooklyn early today. There were almost 1,000 passengers aboard. The steamer had left her pier at W. 14th-st a few hours before she went aground.

Ruggles Accepts Chairmanship of Philippine Day Observance Here

T. Ruggles, president of the American Leprologist of eminent rank, Dr. H. Windsor Wade are waging a thrilling and successful fight.

"The response has been instantaneous. $1,000,000 has been contributed by 15,000 people. Construction of new buildings, of entire new units, of one completely new leprosanium have already begun.

"To the end that this gift of healing from America to her wards in the tropics may be something more than the mere handing out of doles—to the end that history may record that 'once upon a time' a great nation set aside a day, and named it after little brown people who had found refuge under that nation's flag, selecting for this occasion the very anniversary of the day when her great ships and bristling guns had rushed to the thunderous rescue of these bonded people—to those ends the entire nation is invited to an informal observance of May 1st, 1929 as Philippine Day—and Americans everywhere are invited to have in heart the grave and solemn responsibilities that go, inescapably, with administering the affairs and lives of a dependent people.

"That kindly thinking may give tangible bond for its kindness, every town, village and city in the United States is invited to share in erecting this living memorial in life saving to the memory of a great American soldier who spent the full round of his life in service to his country—and a large part of that life in writing the pages of a glorious colonial history in Cuba and the Philippines.

"It will remain for each town to say to what degree it may care to share in this work; the main consideration is that every town shall be a participant. A hundred dollars from one community will mean quite as much of good intention as ten thousand dollars from some other and larger—all that is asked is some participation—an agreement from your town to join with the others, and a gathering together of some funds.

"Will you be our chairman for your own community? We ask no arduous duties of you—we suggest that you form a small committee to assist you, and collect such a sum as may be obtained readily and without embarrassment to your or others.

"If it were physically possible for any member of this committee to see you in person he would tell you what an opportunity he considers this to spread a gospel of goodwill between America and her wards—and what a thrilling opportunity to have a vital share in wiping out one of the last remaining and oldest of the world's scourges.

"Since that is not possible will you not consider this, the only means we have of communicating with you, as a very personal message and as assurance from all of us that the cause is an unusual and deserving one.

"On May 1st, 1929 announcement of these gifts will be made throughout the country by radio from a national dinner in the Hall of Nations of the Washington hotel, Washington D. C.—an announcement of the fact that 31 years after Manila Harbor and Dewey—America—all of America reached out to these people we took under our care that day arms laden with healing and mercy.

"Sincerely yours,
Kermit Roosevelt,
Henry L. Stinson, Secretary of State.

Mrs. Maud Tarbill and Mrs. Gains and Losses in Language About Equal

In the past the English language has gained two or three words and lost one or two every year. The rate of gain is now much higher. Since the world has grown smaller, we have gained many scientific and foreign words, but because time is so husbanded, we have lost many that were worth a thought. While the spread of a literary sense of humor is forcing some good Anglo Saxon words out of use, the mechanical and scientific apparatus which now form a great part of our outer life are bringing in an era of modified, democratic Latinity. The old speech, though it served George Eliot well, will hardly serve us. The scientific and analytic spirit of the day, which takes too little for granted, has made words derived from Greek and Latin fashionable with English writers, while the imposing language used in commercial advertising must eventually affect the vocabulary of the general public.—Observer, London

Mrs. Maud Tarbill and Mrs. Gains and Losses in Language About Equal

In the past the English language has gained two or three words and lost one or two every year. The rate of gain is now much higher. Since the world has grown smaller, we have gained many scientific and foreign words, but because time is so husbanded, we have lost many that were worth a thought. While the spread of a literary sense of humor is forcing some good Anglo Saxon words out of use, the mechanical and scientific apparatus which now form a great part of our outer life are bringing in an era of modified, democratic Latinity. The old speech, though it served George Eliot well, will hardly serve us. The scientific and analytic spirit of the day, which takes too little for granted, has made words derived from Greek and Latin fashionable with English writers, while the imposing language used in commercial advertising must eventually affect the vocabulary of the general public.—Observer, London

The Church Invites You

Worship Meets a Human Need

Christopher Morley has written the following words that has an answer in church attendance, "When I go to the Prune Exchange bank to retrieve my pass-book, I always think how helpful if there were somewhere to leave my mind to be written up—collections entered, debits and credits noted, soul-balanced and carried forward."

Thoughtful worship does exactly what is expressed as a vain hope in this verse. In worship the mind is "written up," the soul is balanced and carried forward. For that reason worship meets a universal and permanent human need.

Creamed Comments On S.S. Lesson

The Ministry of Isaiah, Isaiah 6: 1-8; 20:1-2; 38:1-5 for Sunday, April 7th.

Although no prophet ranks above Isaiah and no prophecy is more inspiring than his, yet of his life, we know but little. Two notes sound forth in his preaching, "The inevitable results of sin," as a punishment of God, and the mercy and the forgiveness of God in case of repentance.

V. 1. "In the year that King Uzziah died I saw the Lord sitting upon the throne, high and lifted up; and his train filled the temple." The death of the good and able king caused great sorrow; Isaiah turned to God for strength going to the place of worship where God revealed himself in an unusual manner.

V. 2. "Above him stood the seraphim; each one had six wings; with twain he covered his face, and with twain he covered his feet, and with twain he did fly." The seraphim were messengers of God. The divine glory was so resplendent that "with twain he covered his face," covering his feet symbolized modesty; reverence, humility and swift obedience are symbolized by wings.

V. 3. "And one cried to another and said, 'Holy, holy, holy is Jehovah of hosts; the whole earth is full of his glory.' Holy character is God's crowning glory; when he reigns the earth is safe.

V. 4. "And the house was filled with smoke." Smoke was a symbol of wrath indicating God's great displeasure of sin.

V. 5. "And then I said, Woe is me! for I am undone; because I am a man of unclean lips and I dwell in the midst of a people of unclean lips; for mine eyes have seen the King, Jehovah of hosts." The prophet felt himself a part of sinful people and therefore unqualified to be in the presence of a pure, holy God.

V. 6. "Then flew one of the seraphim unto me, having a live coal in his hand which he had taken with the tongs from off the altar." The prophet's humiliation and confession was his needed preparation for a blessing—the blessing of cleansing for the effective declaration of God's message.

V. 7. "And I heard the voice of the Lord saying, whom will I send and who will go for me?" Then I said, Here am I send me." The next privilege of the prophet was to hear God's voice with its appeal for a messenger to be sent to sinful Israel; it was a challenge to the prophet to undertake a needed and hard task; he responded with profound earnestness.

V. 1. "Thus saith Jehovah, set thy house in order; for thou shalt die and not live." Hezekiah was one of the best kings of his day and he like the poorest man came to his last day on earth; he had many duties that needed attention but the one great duty was his preparation to meet God in peace.

V. 2. "The Hezekiah turned his face to the wall and prayed unto Jehovah." No man is too great or too good to pray. There comes times when it is plainly seen that the only help comes from God.

Wisdom calls for a recognition of the need of God constantly and that the individual live a life of prayer. Often ill is turned aside by God's intervention. God hears and answers prayers.

PSYCHOLOGY AND THE DAY'S WORK by Edgar James Swift, Charles Scribner's Sons deal with the impracticability of the fanatical methods that have been used in the application of psychology to business and the practicality of common sense and human methods applied to every aspect of business life. It is written in a popular vein to appeal to every reader.

Discussion on Questions S.S. Lesson

The Ministry of Isaiah — Isaiah 6:1-13; 7:1-7; 20:1-6; 38:1-22 for Sunday, April 7th.

1. What was the office of a prophet?

2. What were the characteristics of Isaiah, the prophet?

3. How account for Isaiah's vision?

4. How distinguish between a true vision and an idle fancy?

5. When is a government safe?

6. What may the church do today when wrong steps are taken by our government?

Clericus says, "Great leaders have been praying men and women. Even when death seemed near and failure certain, they went to God in fervid prayer, in great penitence. Our conviction is that their prayers were answered and achievement followed."

The Meaning of Neighbors

Edgar Guest tells a story of two neighbors that illustrates what a good neighbor really means. It is of a successful business man of Philadelphia, who many years ago was on the brink of being a financial bankrupt; bankers would not increase his loans and his relatives and nearest friends were skeptical of giving him a lift. A neighbor, however, saw that he was dejected and looked as if he were in trouble. "Something is wrong over there," he told his wife. "I wonder what it can be."

The next morning he walked over to the dejected man.

"I've been thinking about you," he said, "Are you in trouble? Is there something I can do to help?"

"I'll advance the money you need," said his neighbor quietly.

When asked why he responded in this way, he said, "I had seen that man day in and day out with his family. I knew his habits of life; I knew him to be worthwhile. When I saw him in trouble, I wanted to help him if I could."

That was the lift that saved the man from financial ruin—the lift of a good neighbor.

EDUCATIONAL PREPARATION A GROWING REQUIREMENT FOR SUCCESS IN MODERN BUSINESS

Death-Knell Sounded for Guesswork and Slipshod Methods by Advancing Technical Proficiency in Finance, Trade and Industry—How Banks Are Developing a Professionally Qualified Generation of Younger Bankers.

By HAROLD STONIER
American Bankers Association

THE great school of Experience is still holding classes in America, but the scientific spirit of the age has so generally invaded the workshops of industry and trade that they have largely become technical research and training laboratories in themselves and are no longer run on the old-fashioned cut-and-try methods of former generations when Experience was considered the only teacher. It would be hard to find a working force in any pre-eminent successful business or industrial organization in the United States today but what the dominating leadership is schooled in the scientific principles of its specific field, whether manufacturing, merchandising or finance. The rapidly advancing standards of business in this country, with their relentless demands for efficiency as the only hope for survival in the competitive struggle for economic existence, has sounded the death-knell for guesswork and slipshod methods.

As a result, educational preparation in the techniques of commerce, industry and finance are virtually essential to outstanding success in these fields, as it is already an absolute prerequisite in the various recognized professions. This is not to depreciate the value of native ability and experience in business, but education after all is merely a means of helping the individual to apply the net good of the accumulated experience of many to his own day's work—a means for helping special native ability to come into its own more rapidly and surely and for enabling all classes of ability to gain the maximum of success to which they are entitled.

These facts are plainly recognized by practical, work-a-day business in every line. Every progressive business organization in America is emphasizing the importance of education as never before. Education has come to be looked upon as the answer to many of the problems within the organization as well as to problems affecting industry as a whole.

Business Organizing Institutes

Institutes for developing specifically qualified workers are being operated or organized in many fields of commercial and industrial activity. These institutes are trying various types of educational work with a distinct trend toward more and more emphasis upon education for the rank and file of business employees of all grades.

We have been having business failures in this country at the rate of about 2000 a month. This score speaks for itself. It is glaring evidence of incompetence on the part of thousands of business men in handling the problems inherent in their fields of endeavor. The detailed records show that practically 75% of business failure in this country is due to lack of training and competence on the part of those who failed. This is conclusive evidence that no one can afford to undertake executive business responsibility without adequate education and training. It is for that reason that every enlightened business organization is today insisting as never before that its employees take advantage of some type of technical training.

American banking is fortunate and has just cause for pride in that it has a record of twenty-eight years of definitely organized educational activity among its workers to its credit for developing trained bankers. People in banks in large numbers are taking advantage of the educational opportunity given by the great non-commercial college of the banking business, the American Institute of Banking. They see on every hand evidence of the value of the training it gives. Of the 10,000 graduates of this Institute, 70% now occupy official positions in American banks. The other 30% are still too young to have attained such heights. Here is an example and an encouragement to the people of all lines of business.

The American Institute of Banking has a membership of 67,220. Of these 52,831 are class enrollees, comprising 30,000 bank people, both men and women, who are learning the scientific technique of their chosen business at the same time they are engaged in the practical work of earning their livings at it. The difference between the 52,831 enrolled in classes and the 67,220 total membership comprises 14,389 bankers who have taken the Institute course in the past or are at the present time sponsoring some type of educational work in the organization.

Banking Educates Its People

It has been estimated that there are probably 200,000 bank officers and employees in the United States at the present time. These figures would mean that about one banker in every six is either enrolled in or has taken the Institute course in the past or are at the present time sponsoring some type of educational work in the organization. No statement could possibly give more emphasis to the importance placed on education by the banking interests of America than these facts.

This American Institute of Banking is the educational section of the American Bankers Association. It was formed twenty-eight years ago by bank employees and officers and has been carried on ever since as a voluntary organization. Many students who have graduated continue their membership in order to give active support to some type of educational work other than the actual class program.

The greater part of the educational work is carried on in 200 cities and towns in the United States. Here the local chapter of the American Institute of Banking has its regularly organized courses of study under supervision of the national body with local instructors and directors to fulfill the standard requirements regarding text material, classwork and examinations.

Instructors are recruited from the staffs of leading universities, from members of the legal profession and from among accountants and bank men who have made a record in some field of activity in banking that marks them as experts. All instructors must be approved by the national organization. They are compensated by the local units. The students pay tuition, in which they are frequently aided by their employing banks, and this, together with contributions made by the banks for general classroom overhead, finances the educational program.

Education a Pathway to Advancement
Leading banks in various parts of the country are insisting that their employees take work in the Institute. This is frequently a part of their contract of employment at the time they enter the bank. It is also now quite generally understood in the field of American banking that study in the American Institute of Banking is considered one of the basic factors in the promotion of the individual to a place of importance in a bank.

A Standard Certificate of the American Institute of Banking is annually gaining a greater and wider recognition among practical bankers throughout the United States. These certificates are coming to have the same importance in the banking world that certificates of education have in the field of the general professions. This is a practical example and one thoroughly well demonstrated by seasoned experience of the new spirit of American business.

Why milk twelve poor cows when one good cow will do the work of the twelve? asks the bulletin of the American Bankers Association Agricultural Commission. It declares that analysis of more than 100,000 individual yearly records from cows on test in dairy herd improvement associations indicate that on the average:

Body Weakened by Illness Easy Prey for Germs, Says Medical Authority, Stressing Importance of Full Recovery Before Taking Up Daily Tasks.

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.
United States Senator from New York.
Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.

IN the very nature of things as they are at present, there will be children to have measles, and adults to have influenza or hard colds. The time will come when these diseases will disappear, but that glad day has not arrived.

For a long time doctors will be needed to deal with these ailments. It is fortunate we have the medical men.

But here is a problem: Why do not people realize that it is the aftermath of these ailments that is dangerous? Indeed, the after-effects of the troubles I have mentioned, as well as of other diseases, are far more important than their immediate effects.

Nobody dies of measles, or influenza, or colds. If anybody dies, it is because of a "complication," of an effect produced by the original disease.

The pus germs, the germs of pneumonia, the germs of tuberculosis, are always watchfully waiting. They are all ready to pounce on the body weakened by disease.

The most important thing about measles and influenza and such ailments is to get well of the disease without getting something else. For that reason, the after care of a patient is in many respects vastly more important than his care in the height of the disease.

In olden times, it was announced in triumphant tones, "The fever is broke." Yes, the fever may be broken, the immediate danger may be passed, but there is much left to do. The weakened and emaciated and debilitated victim of disease must be restored to strength and vigor and renewed resistance.

I have in mind now a dear woman who first had influenza. Then she developed broncho-pneumonia. After the acute symptoms of the latter disease disappeared, she failed to "get up" as she should. It was about that time I happened in for a neighborly call and was asked for a professional opinion. Since her own doctor had gone on a vacation, I undertook an examination. This revealed a dullness in the upper part of the right lung.

A doctor doesn't like this condition. When it is associated with occasional elevation of temperature a degree or two above normal, coughing spells, loss of appetite and red cheeks, it means infection. What sort of infection? Probably tubercular. That was what happened in the case I have described. Lowered resistance and the weakened lung had prepared the way for the germs of tuberculosis.

The Limit

Little Anita was in the first month of the first year of her school life. Unhappily she had learned the consecutive order of numbers as far as seven. She couldn't imagine that anything in the counting line could exist beyond that figure.

Just at that time her mother reached another milestone on the road of life and the members of the family visited her many happy returns of the day. When it came to Anita's turn, she said:

"Many happy returns of the day mother. I hope you live— and then after a long and thoughtful pause, "for seven years more."

THE 1929 Oldsmobile is winning even greater admiration from owners, because it is

DESIGNED TO DO ALL THINGS WELL

It is a relatively simple engineering task to design a car that emphasizes only a few qualities at the sacrifice of others. It is an engineering achievement, however, to combine all desirable qualities to an outstanding degree in a balanced whole. Yet that is exactly what Oldsmobile engineers have done in the new 1929 Oldsmobile.

You have only to drive it to realize what brilliant all-around performance it provides. Its big high-compression engine now delivers 62 horsepower.

And the piston pins are pressure-lubricated, a feature formerly characteristic of high-priced automobiles.

In appearance, this finer Oldsmobile is as beautiful and as smart as any car on automobile row. Its grace of line—its perfection of detail—its harmony of color—all bespeak the artistry of Fisher craftsmanship.

The interiors are luxuriously appointed and richly upholstered... they are roomy and restful as well. And the new Fisher adjustable front seat, combined with Oldsmobile's adjustable steering wheel, assures a comfortable driving position.

Come in. Drive the 1929 Oldsmobile. Enjoy the results of full development of all the qualities that contribute to motor-pleasure.

EDUCATIONAL PREPARATION A GROWING REQUIREMENT FOR SUCCESS IN MODERN BUSINESS

Death-Knell Sounded for Guesswork and Slipshod Methods by Advancing Technical Proficiency in Finance, Trade and Industry—How Banks Are Developing a Professionally Qualified Generation of Younger Bankers.

By HAROLD STONIER
American Bankers Association

THE great school of Experience is still holding classes in America, but the scientific spirit of the age has generally invaded the workshops of industry and trade that they have largely become technical research and training laboratories in themselves and are no longer run on the old-fashioned cut-and-try methods of former generations when Experience was considered the only teacher. It would be hard to find a working force in any pre-eminent successful business or industrial organization in the United States today but what the dominating leadership is schooled in the scientific principles of its specific field, whether manufacturing, merchandising or finance. The rapidly advancing standards of business in this country, with their relentless demands for efficiency as the only hope for survival in the competitive struggle for economic existence, has sounded the death-knell for guesswork and slipshod methods.

As a result, educational preparation in the techniques of commerce, industry and finance are virtually essential to outstanding success in these fields, as it is already an absolute prerequisite in the various recognized professions. This is not to depreciate the value of native ability and experience in business, but education after all is merely a means of helping the individual to apply the not good of the accumulated experience of many to his own day's work—a means for helping special native ability to come into its own more rapidly and surely and for enabling all classes of ability to gain the maximum of success to which they are entitled.

These facts are plainly recognized by practical, work-a-day business in every line. Every progressive business organization in America is emphasizing the importance of education as never before. Education has come to be looked upon as the answer to many of the problems within the organization as well as to problems affecting industry as a whole.

Business Organizing Institutes
Institutes for developing specifically qualified workers are being operated or organized in many fields of commercial and industrial activity. These institutes are trying various types of educational work with a distinct trend toward more and more emphasis upon education for the rank and file of business employees of all grades.

We have been having business failures in this country at the rate of about 2,000 a month. This score speaks for itself. It is glaring evidence of incompetence on the part of thousands of business men in handling the problems inherent in their fields of endeavor. The detailed records show that practically 75% of business failure in this country is due to lack of training and competence on the part of those who failed. This is conclusive evidence that no one can afford to undertake executive business responsibility without adequate education and training. It is for that reason that every enlightened business organization is today insisting as never before that its employees take advantage of some type of technical training.

American banking is fortunate and has just cause for pride in that it has a record of twenty-eight years of definitely organized educational activity among its workers to its credit for developing trained bankers. People in banks in large numbers are taking advantage of the educational opportunity given by the great non-commercial college of the banking business, the American Institute of Banking. They see on every hand evidences of the value of the training it gives. Of the 10,000 graduates of this Institute, 70% now occupy official positions in American banks. The other 30% are still too young to have attained such heights. Here is an example and an encouragement to the people of all lines of business.

The American Institute of Banking has a membership of 64,320. Of these 33,351 are class enrollees, comprising younger bank people, both men and women, who are learning the scientific technique of their chosen business at the same time they are engaged in the practical work of earning their livings at it. The difference between the 33,351 enrolled in classes and the 64,320 total membership comprises older bankers who have taken the Institute courses in the past or are at the present time sponsoring some type of educational work in the organization.

Banking Educates Its People
It has been estimated that there are probably 375,000 bank officers and employees in the United States at the present time. These figures would mean that about one banker in every six is either enrolled in Institute classes in banking or is actively supporting some educational function of the organization. No statement could possibly give more emphasis to the importance placed

Body Weakened by Illness Easy Prey for Germs, Says Medical Authority, Stressing Importance of Full Recovery Before Taking Up Daily Tasks.

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.

Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.

IN the very nature of things as they are at present, there will be children to have measles, and adults to have influenza or hard colds. The time will come when these diseases will disappear, but that glad day has not arrived.

DR. COPELAND

For a long time doctors will be needed to deal with these ailments. It is fortunate we have the medical men.

But here is a problem: Why do not people realize that it is the aftermath of these ailments that is dangerous? Indeed, the after-effects of the troubles I have mentioned, as well as of other diseases, are far more important than their immediate effects.

Nobody dies of measles, or influenza, or colds. If anybody dies, it is because of a "complication," of an effect produced by the original disease.

The pus germs, the germs of pneumonia, the germs of tuberculosis, are always watchfully waiting. They are all ready to pounce on the body weakened by disease.

Guides to Appetite

The best guide to what you should eat is your appetite. If you crave a certain dish, the chances are it will do you good. Diets are often necessary, but let your doctor decide that. Unnecessary diets make people wrongly introspective.

THE GOD OF OUR FATHERS

—I thank thee, and praise thee, O thou God of my Fathers, who hast given me wisdom and might, and hast made known unto me now what we desired of thee; for thou hast now made known unto us the king's matter.— Daniel 2:23.

PRAYER—"God of our fathers be the God of their succeeding race."

THE OLD-FASHIONED HOME

We have all heard something of the old-fashioned home—the home that our fathers and mothers tell us about—the simple, plain dwelling place, whether in city or country, where our grandparents and the children lived together the greater part of their time.

There is much to be said for that old home life. It held the family together in a close bond of interest, love and fellowship. Parents had a chance to hand over their stock of ideas—educational, political and religious to the children; they had their time to life and meeting the problems that would confront them. The parents of the old-fashioned home could shield their children, for the most part, from the destructive influences of the outside world.

There were also disadvantages; the old-fashioned home kept from the children much useful information and many broadening experiences, too often life work and life companions were forced upon the children; sometimes authority becomes autocratic and really becomes a bar to progress, since it takes away from youth its initiative.

If the best of the old-fashioned homes could be kept in our present homes, we might have more ideal conditions.

OLD AND NEW HAVANA

Havana is rapidly becoming one of the favorite ports of call for the American tourist. The great influx of visitors has made the Cuban capital a "boom town," hotels and shopkeepers are thriving, and the city is becoming Americanized at a rapid rate.

To the American tourist, Havana's chief charm—aside, perhaps, from the fact that Cuba does not have prohibition—lies in Havana's atmosphere of old-time romance. Relics of colonial Spain are found on every hand, and they constitute the city's chief attraction.

But a writer in the current Harper's Bazaar reveals that the Cuban finds these things extremely boring. To him, the notable things about the city are its modern improvements. He waxes eloquent over the wide new streets, the electric lights, the Americanized suburbs, the up-to-date shops, while the American visitor, fleeing from just such things, spends his time looking for that which is out of date and quaint.

It makes a difference, apparently, whether a place is your home town or just a vacation spot.

Bread, Eh?

Three-year-old Corine's favorite pastime was to cut out pictures in newspapers. Her mother warned her not to let the scraps fall to the floor. One evening she excitedly ran to her mother and exclaimed: "Oh, mother! I dropped the newspaper crumbs on the floor!"

Highgate English Village

The village of Flash, on the edge of Staffordshire and Derbyshire which is 1,500 feet above sea level, is said to be the highest in England. Alston, a place of more than 3,000 people, has the steepest, narrowest street to be found in the country.

THE "NEW BOOK"

Directors See Telephone Girls As Movie Queens of the Future

WILL the "hello girl" of today be a queen of the talking movies tomorrow?

This is the question many movie directors have been asking themselves since the advent of the voice of the movies. Just being an actor is not sufficient; one must have the voice to go with it.

Every day in the year, The Ohio Bell Telephone Company is engaged in the development of just such voices, for it is said that a good telephone voice is also a good voice for the sound pictures.

Putting the smile in the voice with a smile is not as simple as it seems and many an operator of the Ohio Bell system will tell you so. Before a new operator is stationed at an exchange switchboard, she must undergo a training course of two weeks, during which she is instructed in voice as well as in the technique of the switchboard.

Two subjects are stressed in the vocal course. They are "personal touch" and "enunciation." The former develops a pleasant softness of tone, the latter distinctness and accuracy of sound.

That Colorful Voice

Resonance and breathing exercises are two very important phases of the voice training. Resonance gives the voice life and color, and even though the tone is carefully modulated and subdued, this quality gives it carrying power.

Personality in Tone

The talking movies have demonstrated that often the voice of an actor changes his entire personality. In like manner, the voices of telephone operators create the personality of the telephone company.

by the appearance of the buildings that house them, and others by the personality of their sales forces, but the telephone company must be judged by its voice.

"Voice training is a very difficult thing to teach," said Miss Lydia Erickson of Cleveland, general instructor for the Ohio Bell Northeastern Area. "It is so intangible. Our girls must just reach out and grasp the idea without any definite laws to guide them. The greatest difficulty is in getting them to sound the consonants properly. Vowels are open sounds, whereas consonants are obstructed sounds. Clean-cut speech is produced only by the proper forming and shaping of sound."

"By bringing out the quality of resonance, we are able to modulate the volume of the voice and still give it greater carrying power. The secret is in bringing the voice up into the resonance chambers of the head—for the open spaces of the head act in the same manner as a sound box in forming the tone of the voice. This is much easier on the speaker than when she keeps her voice down in her throat, and the sound is more distinct and has greater carrying power."

The files of The Ohio Bell Telephone Company are rich in stories of operators who by thinking clearly and accurately have averted some crisis or other. In some instances, fires have broken out and the persons attempting to report them have been so excited as to render coherent utterance impossible. Gathering something of the situation from the words of the patron, the operator has completed the call and delivered the message. In other cases, badly needed medical aid has been summoned.

Impatient Griselda

WHAT HAS HAPPENED SO FAR.

WHEN Lilith Holden died and left the infant Lilith, Guinn, her husband, married Irene Robeline, who had been in love with Guinn. For twenty years Irene worked and slaved as the wife of the handsome Texas minister. The love she hoped to earn she found was given wholly to the beautiful grown-up Lilith. As Guinn spoiled the blonde image of the dead Lilith, Irene buried her grief in ministering to her own children, Tina, Ross, Lundy and Patricia, who were secondary in their father's affections. After college Lilith, given a year to study music in New York, fell in love with Bill Chester, scion of wealth and family tradition. At home Tina wearing Lilith's cast off clothes, which failed to hide her dark gypsy-like beauty, becomes engaged to a handsome lad, Dan, beloved by all the family. Lilith, seeking only her own selfish ends, breaks her engagement with Roger Devereux, Texas boy, when Bill promises to end his betrothal to Sally Burton, society girl. Before sailing for Paris where his rich grandfather has demanded his presence, Bill madly in love with Lilith devotes his last week to her. Before sailing she seals her love by giving herself to him. Lilith spends her days re-reading Bill's cables confirming his love. But in Paris he agrees to marry Sally at his grandfather's command. Lilith is stunned with the message, "Sally and I were married this morning. Forgive me and forget." Lilith for the first time learned grief. She threw herself into her music study. Then came an offer of a Winter in Paris with Vivien Winthrop, an opportunity to wither Bill with scorn. But a doctor's visit ends all. Lilith is to have a child. She moves to an unknown address. Will Lundy, family friend, finds her there and tells the truth to Irene upon his return.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

CHAPTER LVIII.

"BUT that's the very reason he couldn't stand it. Don't you see?" she cried brokenly.

"He'll remember that I objected to her going—and didn't want her to stay, after the 1-ans left. He'll blame himself so terribly!"

"He ought to. And anyhow, he's got to know." "No, no!" Her face was appalled at the thought.

"How are you going to keep him from it?" "Color swept back to her blanched face, a look of resolve to her tearless eyes. "I'll make an excuse to go to New York! I'll see her through!"

"Irene, don't be crazy!" "He couldn't bear this, Will. I've got to bear it for him." "But you can't!"

"Yes, I can, somehow. Oh, what if it were Tina?" Her eyes were scalded with tears.

"Then you'd let Guinn know and share the burden with you," he accused her.

"Yes—because it wouldn't hurt him so much if it were anybody but Lilith. Think how it would wreck his work—his life. He couldn't hide it, he's too guileless."

"How could he ever stand in the music, hold his head up anywhere—again?" Her words came in staccato jerks.

"Do you think you can lie?" he asked ironically.

"I can do anything—to save him heartbreak. You'll help me, Will?" "Of course. I'd stamped hell, I'd put out a prairie fire with my bare hands, if it would do you any good. I'll be standing right by you when the last trump sounds. But I think you're out of your mind!"

Her lips trembled, and she snatched his hand to kiss it. "Dear, dear Will! You've meant so much to me, always!"

"A hell of a lot I've meant to you." "If you had a daughter of your own, Will, you'd . . . realize what this would mean to Guinn," she faltered.

A bleak smile came on his face. "No, I have no daughter. The children of Alice call Bartam father."

"Oh, Will!" she cried brokenly, and leaned her head against his shoulder as sobs racked her.

"Steady, Irene, steady!" he warned her. "Save your strength, for we're going to need it. Now let's work out a plan of campaign. A plan that will hold water."

"Yes," she whispered, as she sat up and dried her eyes. "I'll give out that I'm going back to New York to study hospitals for a few weeks. I'll leave right away, so I can be there to meet you when you come."

"When can you break away?" "I'd better go on Saturday—so I don't have to face all those women asking questions on Sunday at church."

"That's sensible. There are buzzard gossip in this town, and we don't want them to scent out any prey."

"I'll leave explanations to Guinn and Tina. They won't know anything to conceal, so they can fool the people."

"All right, then. I'll meet you at the Pennsylvania station next Monday. Wire me, in care of the Pennsylvania Hotel, what train you're on. Don't worry. I'll see you through."

His words pumped hope into her heart as if by a hypodermic syringe. He turned abruptly and left the room.

That evening, when Guinn and she were alone in their bedroom, she began her attempt at deception.

"Guinn, dear," she began, lightly brushing the hair back from his forehead, "there's something I want very much to do. Will you let me?" Her voice wobbled a bit, but he didn't seem to notice.

"Am I a domestic tyrant?" he asked indulgently.

"No. But this is something special—something you may think foolish."

"I often do. But you go ahead and do what you want to, anyhow." She gave him a playful shake that he might not feel the trembling of her body close to his.

"I want to go to New York for a little visit and come home with Lilith," she blurted out.

"Oh, Lilith will be coming home right away. I've made up my mind to wire her her pleasure year is up. She'll be here before you could get ready to start."

"Now you are objecting, after all," she complained in a whimsical tone. "Did it sound whimsical to him?"

"What makes you take such a sudden notion?" he countered.

"I'm a sudden person, sometimes. And I haven't had a vacation in a coon's age. . . . I could stay a little while in New York and then bring Lilith home. You'd like that, wouldn't you, Guinn?"

He smoked his evening cigar reflectively. "Wait till Tina's wedding is over—" he began.

"You're always holding up everything till the girls get married, and then you won't let them marry when they want to!" she cut in.

He puffed, unperturbed by her vehemence. "After Tina's wedding is off our minds, you and I'll go up there together. Sort of second honeymoon. We never did have a wedding trip, did we?"

No, they never even had a wedding, never even got married, she told herself.

"We'll go again then," she said recklessly. "But I want most awful, Guinn, to go now. And I won't ask you for the money. I'll take part of my own pleasure money."

"You're really serious about this, Irene?" he asked her.

"Very serious. It came over me at once, a full-grown plan. I feel I can't bear it—if you don't let me go."

He rubbed his forehead, as he did when he was perplexed. "Well, women are queer. But if you aren't willing to wait a few months for me to go with you—what can I say?"

Oh, how she longed to yield to his invitation! How ironic that it should come only now, when she couldn't.

She steeled her voice, to answer. "I know it seems selfish of me, Guinn, but—I'll make it up to you later—somehow. Just indulge me in this."

"When do you want to start?" he asked gloomily.

"The sooner I start, the sooner I'll be ready to come home. I can leave here Saturday—and be with Lilith Monday night."

"I'll send her a wire you're coming," he offered.

"No, please don't! I want to surprise her. Please promise me you won't say a word."

"Suit yourself." There was a sharp edge of reserve in his voice. She stooped over him, her eyes full of yearning love, which she mustn't let him see. What if anything happened to him while she was gone? If harm came to one of the children?

As she lay in the darkness beside him, and listened to his sleeping breath, her pillow was wet with tears. She sent up shuddering prayers for guidance, for strength, for wisdom. She asked God over and over to help her lie convincingly.

Next morning Guinn looked at her hopefully, as if thinking surely she had changed her mind and would tell him she wasn't going. But finding that she hadn't changed, he was silent, morose. At his look of disappointment and grievance she felt impelled to laugh hysterically. Instead, she had to pour his coffee and pass it to him, her brow tranquil, her hand quiet.

She seemed to hear Will Lundy's voice beside her: "Steady, Irene, steady."

If she rattled the cups a trifle more than usual, Guinn failed to notice it, and went his way as soon as he had eaten.

Dan dropped by on his way to the office to have a cup of coffee and a word with Tina. The boys and Pat had hustled off to school.

"Why'd father go gloomy this morning?" asked Tina.

"He has melancholia because I'm going to leave him for a couple of weeks. Going to New York."

Tina stared at her in amazement. "What in the world for?" "I thought I'd see the sights, have a little change, and bring Lilith home," she answered in a tone she hoped was jaunty.

"Oh, Mother, not really? Take me with you?" She shook her head. "Not this time, darling."

"Oh, but think what fun we could all have together. Father didn't let me go when I wanted to, to study." Her tone was eager, her white face alight with anticipation.

"No, dear, you stay home and look after Father and the youngsters. You'll be going on your wedding trip the first thing you know."

"I've half a mind to elope while you're gone!" she cried rebelliously.

"So long as Dan and you elope with each other, I shouldn't object," she laughed. She poured herself an extra cup of coffee, feeling in need of a stimulant.

"Well, I must say I think this is funny!" scowled Tina. "All of a sudden like this. But you don't mean it, for you wouldn't leave your garden in planting time," she cried hopefully.

"You thought I'd go," she said. "I haven't had a vacation in ever and ever."

"Well, if you really are set on going, then I want you to go," Tina capitulated magnanimously. "I'll root for you, and I'll take care of the house and family."

"That's my good daughter," she said approvingly. "And I'll pick up something nice for your trousseau there. . . ."

When Will Lundy came by that morning she told him somewhat hysterically of the progress of her plan: "My family think I'm crazy."

"Right they are! Are you still sure it's the best thing to do?" he growled.

"Quite so. But what a liar I am getting to be! I smell the brimstone heating for me. I scramble from lie to lie like Eliza crossing the ice."

"Going to leave anybody with the children?" "Miss Mattie. She's a hair shirt. She'll keep the family irritated and hot up so they won't be lonesome."

He looked at her dubiously. "Miss Mattie is a witch for guessing secrets. And she's got a tongue like an alarm clock."

"The family won't know anything to conceal, so there'll be no suspicion. Miss Mattie gets along better with Sheba than anyone else does that I could ask to come. They agree on company and spoiling menfolks and a few other live topics. I've thought it all out."

"Well, here's hoping." Sheba was harder to fool than anyone in the family. When Irene told her of the plan, the jungle eyes narrowed in a knowing look, the thick lips stuck out rebelliously. "Looking like they'd been stung by a bumblebee," the boys said of Sheba's angry lips.

"Huccum Miss Lily can't ride home by herself on a railroad train?" she demanded. "Leave my baby, when she goin' off treckly anyhow?"

"Miss Lilith isn't well, Sheba." The tall form straightened wrathfully. "Who wants her to come back beach, anyways? Bessing everybody on the place. . . . Why'n't you leave her stay there? New York's good enough for her."

Ignited by Steam
That it is possible to light a cigar with steam was demonstrated before the Royal Institution of London. Doctor Charles Anderson produced a "pressure steam" hot enough to set fire to shavings and cigars. The scientist explained that the steam, which escapes from a teakettle, is not, strictly speaking, real fire, but, in fact, is a gas.

Spanish Sailor First to Discover Australia

While in South America, Doctor Rosenbach of Philadelphia is said to have acquired many interesting papers, including one which bears the only known signature of the discoverer of Australia, Capt. Pedro Fernando de Quiros. It commissions Gaspar de Gay and Manuel Noble as sailing masters of the ships San Pedro and San Pedro y Pablo, about to proceed on "the discovery of the unknown austral regions of this South sea by order of the king," and is dated Lima, July 27, 1605.

On leaving Callao harbor Quiros was, it is stated in records of him, asked to lay down a course, and he replied: "Let her go as she is; God will take her somewhere." The ships came to the land fringe of Australia—"southern land"—and were separated by a storm. Returning, Quiros, now penniless, got a new outfit from Spain to continue the exploration, but died of fever on reaching Panama.

License Numbers

It is a pleasure to announce for the first time, when the bishop was licensed by the diocese of Ohio, and in a good way, he was asked who that man was. He sat back and looked about the church. Presently his gaze was fastened on the hymn board. Again he leaned toward his mother and a kid: "Are those the bishop's automobile license numbers?"

Daily Thought

Our business in life is not to get ahead of ourselves. To break our own record, to outstrip yesterday by today, to bear our trials more beautifully than we ever dreamed we could, to whip the tempter inside and out as we never whipped him before, to give as we never have given before, to do our work with more force and a finer finish than ever—this is the true idea—to get ahead of ourselves.—Malcolm D. "Well, suppose I'll have to wait until Wednesday," said the lad.
"Why do you expect to go Wednesday?" asked his mother.
"Because that is bridge night and dad and I always go on a lark while you're bridging," replied the lad triumphantly.

Ignited by Steam

That it is possible to light a cigarette with steam was demonstrated before the Royal Institution of London. Doctor Andrade produced high-pressure steam hot enough to set fire to shavings and cigarettes. The scientist explained that the steam which escapes from a teakettle is not, strictly speaking, real steam. By the time it emerges it has condensed into tiny drops of liquid and has ceased to be steam in the true sense. Real water steam is an invisible gas.

Spanish Sailor First to Discover Australia

While in South America, Doctor Rosenbach of Philadelphia is said to have acquired many interesting papers, including one which bears the only known signature of the discoverer of Australia, Capt. Pedro Fernandez de Quiros. It commissions Gaspar de Gay and Manuel Noble as sailing masters of the ships San Pedro and San Pedro y Pablo, about to proceed on "the discovery of the unknown austral regions of the king," and is dated Lima, July 27, 1605.

On leaving Callao harbor Quiros was, it is related in records of him, asked to lay down a course, and he replied: "Let her go as she is; God will take her somewhere." The ships came to the land fringe of Australia—"southern land"—and were separated by a storm. Returning, Quiros, now penniless, got a new outfit from Spain to continue the exploration, but died of fever on reaching Panama.

License Numbers

Bobbie was taken to church for the first time, when the bishop was officiating. The child was greatly impressed by the dignitary's robes and in a loud whisper asked who that man was. He sat back and looked about the church. Presently his gaze was fastened on the hymn board. Again he leaned toward his mother and asked: "Are those the bishop's automobile license numbers?"

Tub as Fire Engine

The oldest known fire "engine" in England has found a home at the London museum. It is a large oval wooden tub, and water was pumped through an iron pipe in the middle. It rested originally on a carriage with solid wooden wheels, but these have disappeared. The "engine" was made in London in 1678 for a town in Bedfordshire.

Directors See Telephone Girls As Movie Queens of the Future

Will the "hello girl" of today be a queen of the talking movies tomorrow?

This is the question many movie directors have been asking themselves since the advent of the voice of the movies. Just being an actor is not sufficient; one must have the voice to go with it.

Every day in the year, The Ohio Bell Telephone Company is engaged in the development of just such voices, for it is just that—a good telephone voice—that is a good voice for the sound picture.

Putting the smile in the voice with a smile is not as simple as it seems and many an operator at the Ohio Bell system has been so before a new operator is selected at an exchange school, she must undergo a training course of two weeks, during which she is instructed in voice as well as in the technique of the switchboard.

Two subjects are stressed in the vocal course. They are "pitch" and "enunciation." The former develops a pleasant tone of voice, the latter the clarity and accuracy of sound.

That Colorful Voice

Resonance and brightness are two other qualities of the voice training. Resonance gives the voice life and color, and even though the tone is not perfect, it has greater carrying power.

Personality in Tone

The talking movies have demonstrated that often the voice is more important than the face. The voice is the key to the actor's personality. It is the voice that tells the audience what the actor is feeling and what he is thinking. It is the voice that makes the difference between a good actor and a bad one.

The voice course of a telephone girl is as meticulous as that of a singer or orator, and the silvery tones of "Number Please" are coined in the mint of an instructor's blackboard. The actual class room period is of two weeks' duration, but operators are trained constantly during their entire career with the telephone company.

Excitement or wrath are serious deterrents to proper telephone communication. When excited ejaculations come tumbling over the wire, they form a confused jargon from which only an occasional word can be translated. Anger, booming into the transmitter, impedes proper enunciation. Telephone operators must therefore be able to think rapidly and accurately, yet their enunciation must be slow and distinct. Emotion must not color the telephone operator's voice, however exasperating the situation with which she must cope.

The files of The Ohio Bell Telephone Company are rich in stories of operators who by thinking clearly and accurately have averted some crisis or other. In some instances, fires have broken out and the persons attempting to report them have been so excited as to render coherent utterance impossible. Gathering something of the situation from the words of the patron, they have saved the day.

Impatient Griselda

WHAT HAS HAPPENED SO FAR.

WHEN Lilith Holden died and left the infant Lilith, Guinn, her husband, married Irene Robeline, who had been in love with Guinn. For twenty years Irene worked and slaved as the wife of the handsome Texas minister. The love she hoped to earn she found was given wholly to the beautiful grown-up Lilith. As Guinn spoiled this blonde image of the dead Lilith, Irene buried her grief in ministering to her own children, Tina, Ross, Lundy and Patricia, who were secondary in their father's affections. After college Lilith, given a year to study music in New York, fell in love with Bill Chester, scion of wealth and family tradition. At home Tina wearing Lilith's cast off clothes, which failed to hide her dark gypsy-like beauty, becomes engaged to a handsome lad, Dan, beloved by all the family. Lilith, seeking only her own selfish ends, breaks her engagement with Roger Devereux, Texas boy, when Bill promises to end his betrothal to Sally Burton, society girl. Before sailing for Paris where his rich grandfather has demanded his presence, Bill madly in love with Lilith devotes his last week to her. Before sailing she seals her love by giving herself to him. Lilith spends her days re-reading Bill's letters confirming his love. But in Paris he agrees to marry Sally at his grandfather's command. Lilith is stunned with the message, "Sally and I were married this morning. Forgive me and forget." Lilith for the first time learned grief. She threw herself into her music study. Then came an offer of a Winter in Paris with Vivien Winthrop, an opportunity to wither Bill with scorn. But a doctor's visit ends all. Lilith is to have a child. She moves to an unknown address. Will Lundy, family friend, find her there and tell the truth to Irene upon his return.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

CHAPTER LVIII.

"BUT that's the very reason he couldn't stand it. Don't you see?" she cried brokenly. "He'll remember that I objected to her going—and didn't want her to stay, after the 1-ans left. He'll blame himself so terribly!"

"He ought to. And anyhow, he's got to know." "No, no!" Her face was appalled at the thought. "How are you going to keep him from it?"

Color swept back to her blanched face, a look of resolve to her tearless eyes. "I'll make an excuse to go to New York! I'll see her through!"

"Irene, don't be crazy!" "He couldn't bear this, Will. I've got to bear it for him." "But you can't!"

"Yes, I can, somehow. Oh, what if it were Tina?" Her eyes were scalded with tears.

"Then you'd let Guinn know and share the burden with you," he accused her.

"Yes—because it wouldn't hurt him so much if it were anybody but Lilith. Think how it would wreck his work—his life. He couldn't hide it, he's too guileless. How could he ever stand in the pulpit, hold his head up anywhere—again?" Her words came in staccato jerks.

"Do you think you can lie?" he asked ironically.

"I can do anything—to save him heartbreak. You'll help me, Will!" "Of course. I'd stamped hell, I'd put out a prairie fire with my bare hands, if it would do you any good. I'll be standing right by you when the last trump sounds. But I think you're out of your mind!" Her lips trembled, and she snatched his hand to kiss it.

"Dear, dear Will! You've meant so much to me, always!" "A hell of a lot I've meant to you."

"If you had a daughter of your own, Will, you'd realize what this would mean to Guinn," she faltered.

A bleak smile came on his face. "No, I have no daughter. The children of Alice call Bartram father."

"Oh, Will!" she cried brokenly, and leaned her head against his shoulder as sobs racked her.

"Steady, Irene, steady!" he warned her. "Save your strength, for we're going to need it. Now let's work out a plan of campaign. A plan that will hold water."

"Yes," she whispered, as she sat up and dried her eyes.

"What's the plan? I'm going back to New York to study hospitals for a few weeks. I'll leave right away, so I can be there to meet you when you come."

"When can you break away?" "I'd better go on Saturday—so I don't have to face all those women asking questions on Sunday at church."

"That's sensible. There are buzzards gossiping in this town, and we don't want them to scent out any prey."

"I'll leave explanations to Guinn and Tina. They won't know anything to conceal, so they can fool the people."

"All right, then. I'll meet you at the Pennsylvania station next Monday. Wire me, in care of the Pennsylvania station, what train you're on. Don't worry. I'll see you through."

His words pumped home into her heart as if by a hypodermic syringe.

He turned abruptly and left the room.

That evening, when Guinn and she were alone in their bedroom, she began her attempt at deception.

"Guinn, dear," she began, lightly brushing the hair back from his forehead, "there's something I want very much to do. Will you let me?" Her voice wobbled a bit, but he didn't seem to notice.

"Am I a domestic tyrant?" he asked indulgently.

"No. But this is something special—something you may think foolish."

"I often do. But you go ahead and do what you want to, anyhow." She gave him a playful shake that he might not feel the trembling of her body close to his.

"I want to go to New York for a little while and come home with Lilith," she blurted out.

"Oh, Lilith will be coming home right away. I've made up my mind to wire her her pleasure year is up. She'll be here before you could get ready to start."

"Now you are objecting, after all," she complained in a whimsical tone. Did it sound whimsical to him?

"What makes you take such a sudden notion?" he countered.

"I'm a sudden person, sometimes. And I haven't had a vacation in a long age. I could stay a little while in New York and then bring Lilith home. You'd like that, wouldn't you, Guinn?"

He smoked his evening cigar reflectively. "Wait till Tina's wedding is over—" he began.

"You're always holding up everything till the girls get married, and then you won't let them marry when they want to!" she cut in.

He puffed, unperturbed by her vehemence. "After Tina's wedding is off our minds, you and I go up there together. Sort of second honeymoon. We never did have a wedding trip, did we?"

No, they never even had a wedding, never even got married, she told herself.

"We'll go again then," she said recklessly. "But I want most awful, Guinn, to go now. And I won't ask you for the money. I'll take part of my own pleasure money."

"You're really serious about this, Irene?" he asked her.

"Very serious. It came over me at once, a full-grown plan. I feel I can't bear it—if you don't let me go!"

He rubbed his forehead, as he did when he was perplexed. "Well, women are queer. But if you aren't willing to wait a few months for me to go with you—what can I say?"

Oh, how she longed to yield to his invitation! How ironic that it should come only now, when she couldn't.

She steeled her voice, to answer. "I know it seems selfish of me, Guinn, but—I'll make it up to you later—somehow. Just indulge me in this."

"When do you want to start?" he asked gloomily.

The sooner I start, the sooner I'll be ready to come home. I can leave here Saturday—and be with Lilith Monday night."

"I'll send her a wire you're coming," he offered.

"No, please don't! I want to surprise her. Please promise me you won't say a word."

"Suit yourself." There was a sharp edge of reserve in his voice. She stooped over him, her eyes full of yearning love, which he mustn't let him see. What if anything happened to him while she was gone? If harm came to one of the children?

As she lay in the darkness beside him, and listened to his sleeping breath, her pillow was wet with tears. She sent up shuddering prayers for guidance, for strength, for wisdom. She asked God over and over to help her lie convincingly.

Next morning Guinn looked at her hopefully, as if thinking surely she had changed her mind and would tell him she wasn't going. But finding that she hadn't changed, he was silent, morose. At his look of disappointment and grievance she felt impelled to laugh hysterically. Instead, she had to pour his coffee and pass it to him, her brow tranquil, her hand quiet.

Lundy's voice beside her: "Steady, Irene, steady."

If she rattled the cups a trifle more than usual, Guinn failed to notice it, and went his way as soon as he had eaten.

Dan dropped by on his way to the office to have a cup of coffee and a word with Tina. The boys and Pat had hustled off to school. "Why is Father so gloomy this morning?" asked Tina.

"He has melancholia because I'm going to leave him for a couple of weeks. Going to New York."

Tina stared at her in amazement. "What in the world for?"

"I thought I'd see the sights, have a little change, and bring Lilith home," she answered in a tone she hoped was jaunty.

"Oh, mother, not really? Take me with you?"

She shook her head. "Not this time, darling."

"Oh, but think what fun we could all have together. Father didn't let me go when I wanted to, to study." Her tone was eager, her white face alight with anticipation.

"No, dear, you stay home and look after Father and the youngsters. You'll be going on your wedding trip the first thing you know."

"I've half a mind to elope while you're gone!" she cried rebelliously.

"So long as Dan and you elope with each other, I shouldn't object," she laughed. She poured herself an extra cup of coffee, feeling in need of a stimulant.

"Well, I must say I think this is funny!" scowled Tina. "All of a sudden like this. But you don't mean it, for you wouldn't leave your garden in planting time," she cried hopefully.

"Yes, I thought I'd go," she said. "I haven't had a vacation in ever and ever."

"Well, if you really are set on going, then I want you to go," Tina capitulated magnanimously. "I'll root for you, and I'll take care of the house and family."

"That's my good daughter," she said unsteadily. "And I'll pick up something nice for your trousseau there."

When Will Lundy came by that morning she told him somewhat hysterically of the progress of her plan: "My family think I'm crazy."

"Right they are! Are you still sure it's the best thing to do?" he growled.

"Quite so. But what a far I am getting to be! I smell the brimstone heating for me. I scramble from lie to lie like Eliza crossing the ice."

"Going to leave anybody with the children?"

"Miss Mattie. She's a hair shirt. She'll keep the family irritated and het up so they won't be lonesome."

He looked at her dubiously. "Miss Mattie is a witch for guessing secrets. And she's got a tongue like an alarm clock."

"The family won't know anything to conceal, so there'll be no suspicion. And Miss Mattie gets along better with Sheba than any one else does that I could ask to come. They agree on company and spilling menfolk and a few other live topics. I've thought it all out."

"Well, here's hoping."

Sheba was harder to fool than anyone in the family. When Irene told her of the plan, the jungle eyes narrowed in a knowing look, the thick lips stuck out rebelliously. "I'm taking it the boys said they were coming home, and you're going to leave them?"

"Hecceum! Miss Lily can't ride home by herself on a railroad train?" she demanded. "Leave my baby, when she goes off treckly anyhow?"

"Miss Lily isn't well, Sheba."

The tall form straightened wrathfully. "Who wants her to come back here, anyways? Bouncing everybody on the place. . . . Why'n't you leave her stay there? New York's good enough for her."

PLAY REVIEW

"Second Childhood," the best three act play of the year, was presented at the Circleville high school auditorium April 2nd and 3rd. A large audience was in attendance both nights. The house was kept in a gale of hearty laughter during the entire performance.

Evan Phillips and Howard Green as the professor and his assistant were unexcelled. First they had one baby to take care of, and they thought that it was an enormous amount of trouble, but when another baby arrived upon the scene, they both gave up the ghost. Martha Mary Wolfe as the demure, young heroine was quite the "apple" of everyone's eye. Her emotional scenes were exceedingly good. Carl Wallace, the general, took the professor's "Elker of Youth," and then on bended knee made a very graceful and effective proposal to the young heroine. Virginia Given was the aunt who had to shoulder all the responsibilities of her queer household. She was very good when it came time to tell the men what she thought of them. If you want to keep a secret we advise you to tell Mrs. Vivvett, the gossip, all about it; this part was played by Esther Drum. From what we saw of Joe Griffith's acting we have come to the conclusion that he will make a very excellent judge. His part was short, but difficult one to play, and he played it with much ease and confidence. Minnida Lyle registered rapid emotions in the part of the Spanish lady. The part of the aged Mrs. Henderson was difficult to portray. It was commendably played by Hortense Reid. We prophesy that Earl Hussey will some day be playing the part of the hard boiled sheriff in some Hollywood studio. The characters of Lucill, and the deputy sheriff were played by Dorothy Denman and Harold Dumm respectively.

All these actors must be complimented for their excellent performances in the play. Much credit must be given to Mr. Fetherlin, dramatics instructor, for his successful efforts to make this play the best ever given in C. H. S.

Special features between acts were selections by the orchestra, vocal solos by Marie Richey and Mary Mae Haswell, vocal duets by Howard Green and John Henry Terry, and piano selections by Elizabeth Roundhouse. Mr. Fetherlin announced that Martha Mary Wolfe had had the part in the play only one week, because of the illness of Jeanne Crowe, who was to have been the heroine both nights, but was limited to Wednesday night because of her voice. He also announced that Circleville has been chosen as one of the two schools in Ohio to receive a free charter from the National Thespians, an honorary society for high school dramatists.

All furniture was loaned by U. Needit Furniture Co.

High ticket sellers for the play, "Second Childhood" were: Alice Roof, Pauline Hill, Mary Neff, Mary Hoffman, Charlotte Steinhauer, Dorothy Riegel, Hortense Reid and Ruth Carothers.

TALE OF LOYALIST

Listen people and you shall hear Of a coincidence so very queer Which happened without so much as a word At Circleville high on April 2nd and 3rd.

"Second Childhood" as of course you know Had been scheduled, Oh, boy, long ago.

But a theater in town on the self same date Gave a show for school children that was great.

Now the people of Circleville, as you will guess, Patronize the shows before C. H. S.

So "Second Childhood" had a moderate crowd, But all the characters are certainly proud.

For they have been told it was by far the best That has ever been given at C. H. S.

So they are waiting for the future time When they alone are the ones to shine.

And the theaters in town will close the date That they have scheduled to elaborate; Now you have read by each line and word Just what took place April 2nd and 3rd.

SCHOOL DISMISSED

Schools were dismissed Friday of this week in order that the teachers could attend the ninth annual session of the Ohio State Educational Conference. The high school teachers attended the following meetings:

Mr. Eagleson who was to have attended the meetings of city superintendents, principals and physical education and health, Friday and the general programs, Thursday and Friday nights, missed most of these because of the funeral of a relative. Mr. Gephart attended the meetings of principals, Friday, general program, Thursday night, and also a luncheon given for principals, Friday. Mr. Fetherlin attended the meetings of journalism, educational and intelligence tests, and the general program, Friday night. Mr. Johnson attended the meetings of commercial education, physical education and health, teacher training and the general program, Friday night. Mr. Zanglein attended the meeting of industrial arts and vocational education, Friday. Mr. Guthrie attended the meeting of physical education and health, Friday. Mr. Watts attended the non-biological science meeting, Friday. Mr. Rife attended the history meeting, Friday. Miss Pigman attended the meeting of home-economics, Friday. TIGER TROUPE INSTALLED

Circleville has the honor of receiving one of the two free charters of the National Thespians given to high school dramatic classes in Ohio, after observation of plays the past two seasons. It is a large organization covering 40 states, containing high school dramatists who have achieved a certain degree of fame in the field of dramatics. It is a non-secret and non-social organization.

The National Thespians organization is purely honorary. Membership can not be obtained by any method other than exceptional acting in a major role of a three, four, or five act play or meritorious acting in minor roles in four one-act plays. Property managers and stage carpenters rate as minor parts. No part shorter than 20 speeches is recognized. The major role must be carried through at least two-thirds of the play. Authors of plays produced are eligible for membership.

Each local chapter is called a troupe. This chapter will be known as the Tiger Troupe of National Thespians.

The purpose and aim of the organization are: Uniform recognition and reward for meritorious dramatic work in secondary schools; to serve as a stimulus to better dramatics. No national dues will be paid. All local expenses are to be levied and borne by the local troupe.

Martha Mary Wolfe, Veronica Kuhns, Alice Roof, Hortense Reid, Virginia Given, Evan Phillips, Irma Rader, Howard Green, Joe Griffith, Carl Wallace, Esther Drum, Harry Grant, Earl Hussey, Minnida Lyle, Harold Dumm, Jeanne Crowe, and Dorothy Denman having appeared in one to three major roles and four to six minor roles each are eligible and receive free memberships as charter members of the Tiger Troupe. Their work has effected a saving of $60 in money alone to the school and club in securing a charter. National Thespians of Circleville High offer an opportunity for more dramatics aside from class work with an opportunity to produce plays from club members and pledges—those interested and "out to make Thespian."

DOMESTIC SCIENCE

Freshmen are planning to give two luncheons for the teachers in the near future.

Each member of the class is submitting menus and then they will choose one of the best.

MANUAL TRAINING NOTES

Simon Gordon, senior, has completed a walnut chifforobe. Abraham Gordon, sophomore, has completed an inlaid chest of walnut. These brothers are to be complimented on their splendid work.

NURSES TO TALK

Miss Elizabeth Wroslon, supt. Columbus Radium hospital and Lucy L. Taylor will be in Circleville April 9, at one o'clock to talk to senior girls about taking up nursing as a profession.

SEE WAR FILM

Quite a number of students witnessed the war picture "The Big Drive" Tuesday and Wednesday afternoons. A special matinee was held at 4:15 o'clock.

FRESHMEN SCIENCE

The topic for writing theme in Freshmen science this week was: Do you know whether winds actually blow more strongly in the month of March than at other times? This topic was taken from Current Science. The best theme handed in was by Dorothy Mae Glick. The following is Dorothy's theme.

The vernal equinox, which marks the beginning of spring, falls on the 21st of March, and the month is thus partly winter and partly spring.

In its character, too, it partakes of the traits of both seasons, for its cold and its storms are often broken in upon by days of real spring mildness and sunshine.

I believe the winds do blow more strongly in March than at any other time, due to that reason.

It very often happens, however, that severe cold and deep snows continue to the end of the month, and it has the reputation of being windy and blustering. As early spring is a most uncertain season, mild, balmy days, and blizzards are likely to occur in March.

VOCABULARY TESTS

Vocabulary tests, compiled by Alexander Inglis of Harvard Graduate School were given in freshmen and junior English classes. The national medians established are: Freshmen 30; sophomores 42; juniors 52; seniors 58; college freshmen 70.

Pauline Acord, Emil Ross, Helen Palm, Virginia Richey, Elizabeth Cady, Stanley Greene, Helen Kinser, juniors rated as college freshmen with scores above 70.

Dorothy Mae Glick, Gerald McCreary, Gaylord Rose and Catherine Clossen, freshmen gained junior ratings.

The Circleville freshman median was 30; the juniors was 54; two points above the national median.

Miss Watson is giving the test to her senior English class.

SPRING FEVER

A new disease is in our school. It prevails through out the classes. It's quite contagious for its caught, From any one who passes.

'Tis most prevalent in Study Hall. When the school day is almost over;

From the expressions on every face, You can see where it does hover.

Of course its easy to diagnose, Such a common, age old disease;

For it catches old and young alike And makes them feel at ease.

Such a languid, lazy feeling, Mantles one's whole frame;

Accompanied by day-dreaming symptoms, But all results are the same.

The desire to sit and wonder, Yes, idly gaze around;

Or create disturbing noises, Where ever equipment's found.

The cause of this disease, Is the languor of Spring;

For school girls and boys, Just can't study a thing.

ORCHESTRA ENTERTAINS

Monday the orchestra played for the pleasure of the student body. As is always the result, this organization received loud applause and praise.

Mr. Zaenglein, who has charge of the orchestra of C. H. S., certainly does know "What's good for his audiences."

The first selection was a March, Washington Post. This was followed by many varied and pleasant numbers.

The program was arranged according to the following schedule: March, Washington Post; Selection, Operatic Strains; Popular, "I'm Sorry, Sally"; Waltz Song, "Carolina Moon"; Selection, "First Heart Throbs"; March, "On the Mall"; Vocal Duet, "Sweethearts on Parade"; March, "Our Defenders."

ORCHESTRA AT CLIFTONA

C. H. S. Orchestra will give a "between shows" concert during the evening of the 11th at the Cliftona Theater. The feature picture that Thursday evening will be "The Gorilla."

This entertainment will no doubt be a success if their playing measures up to past endeavors. Since the orchestra is in its first benefit performance, students are urged to attend and boost the 25 per cent gate of the "Pride of C. H. S." Regular admission prices will prevail. Tickets may be obtained from members of the orchestra.

EXCHANGE

The Watch Tower.

Rock Island's affirmative debate team defeated East Moline's negative team, 90 to 85 in a debate held in their own auditorium after school Monday evening. The R. I. H. S. negative team, although composed wholly of first year men, was defeated by a margin of three points by the veteran Moline team in a contest held at Moline high school Monday evening.

Rock Island's thinly clad track candidates are progressing rapidly under the efficient tutelage of Mr. Krimmel. About 35 boys are out and prospects for a winning season are fair.

Three of the four high schools in the quad cities have already signified their intention of entering in the annual indoor prep carnival to be held at the Augustana Gym, April 13. The schools who have promised to compete are Rock Island, Moline and Davenport.

The Adenian

The Adena basketball team has made a very creditable showing this year inasmuch as it has won the silver loving cup for the third consecutive time in the Jefferson county tournament. This cup becomes the permanent possession of the Adena high school. Adena also won a cup from the Eastern Ohio Athletic League. Mr. Ray Roshon is superintendent.

The Adena boys' basketball team has lost only two of the 25 games it has played this season. This is a very commendable record.

The Jefferson County Honorary Club has finally been organized after a meeting of all the superintendents and pupils in the county at Steubenville last week. Only those who have an average of 90 in three to four subjects are eligible for membership in this club.

The College Chronicle.

The local Y won its third district championship in many days by winning the district boxing meet and the district wrestling meet here last Thursday. The third championship was in basketball at Aurora last Saturday when the locals defeated Pontiac and Aurora for the title and the right to represent this district at the state meet at Springfield.

The totals of the meets were: Boxing, Naperville 44, Joliet 16; Wrestling, Naperville 38; Street 23; Joliet 5.

The Capitol Chimes

This edition of the Chimes contained some very interesting articles. One we present for approval:

I will pluck the minutes from my life,

One by one Like petals from a flower

This for friendship;

This for joy;

This for sorrow following close behind,

I will pluck the minutes from my life,

Till all I have is a bare stalk.

There were several other short articles that were equally as interesting but lack of space will not permit us to print them.

A large attendance is desired.

GOOD CROWD AT ELKS' DANCE.

The hall at the Elks' club was comfortably filled Friday night with the 40 couples who enjoyed an evening of dancing to the music of a fine orchestra. The frocks of the women were all of the new spring modes, and some were evening gowns and some were informal costumes.

At a little before mid-night the dancers were invited to the dining room where coffee and sandwiches were served in abundance. The informality of the serving at the Elks club always adds a great deal to their dances, and after lunch the time until the end of the dance always moves too quickly. So it was with Friday night. The dance was over, and the orchestra members began picking up their instrument cases before anyone was ready to go home.

SURPRISE GATHERING AT ARMSTRONG HOME

A complete surprise was tendered Mrs. Daniel Macklin, (nee Kathryn Armstrong), on Easter Sunday at the country home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles L. Armstrong, Pickaway county.

"Childhood" Tuberculosis

Issued by Ohio State and Local Public Health Associations

2—How Contracted?

Except in very rare cases, children do not inherit tuberculosis. They usually become infected with tubercle bacilli by contact with someone who has the disease.

Children living in homes where a careless adult has tuberculosis are almost certain to breathe and swallow large numbers of the bacilli. In such cases, if the children are to have a fair chance to live healthy lives the patient must either be sent to a sanatorium, or he must be taught to take every precaution at home.

Bone tuberculosis is frequently contracted through milk from tuberculous cows. The tuberculin testing of dairy herds being carried on in Ohio is rapidly decreasing this danger.
